Born 1971. Living and working in Suffolk, England.

"Making art is like the natural growth and rhythm of the landscapes I portray – it starts with a seed and flourishes at its own pace, giving rise to depth, texture and vibrancy.

I am particularly inspired by the epic scenes and atmosphere of wild landscapes and nature. Curious about the secrets it holds, I like to find ways to convey the way I feel when I am out on location.

I love the seemingly random way nature presents itself, knowing that under that guise there is pattern and meaning to its very existence. In each stroke that I apply paint to the surface of a new painting I am expressing that intuitive movement that wild landscapes show us if we just watch for a little while.

There, I am in my element."
